Online Resources

US HISTORY

<https://www.nysedregents.org/USHistoryGov/home.html>

-This link will take you to the NYS regents website. Here you can open up tabs for the New York tests AND the answer keys. There are several tests to choose from over the past few years. Quiz yourself and check your answers in the answer key. Things you get wrong should be reviewed in your notes or packets you have been given.

-These are teacher resources provided by the Library of Congress. There are unit summaries as well as historical photo galleries, graphs and tables to help you understand our current unit of Industrialization.

<https://www.theusaonline.com/history/industrialization.htm>

-This is an online textbook recap of the early industrial/pre-war era. Reading this will aid your comprehension of the unit.

https://www.metmuseum.org/toah/hd/amer/hd_amer.htm

-This link will take you to the MET online art galleries for the time period of post Civil War America. Look at the pictures and journal down some thoughts, if you look at the bottom right you will see "Related Galleries" feel free to click on those and explore some of the other art work from this time period or others we have studied.

Economics/Government/World Issues:

<https://www.cnn.com/cnn10>

-CNN releases a student version news broadcast every day and it is only 10 minutes long! This is a great way to stay on top of current events and world news at the start of your day. These news stories will help you with your journaling assignments you received in early April.

<https://www.pbslearningmedia.org/subjects/social-studies/>

-PBS has tons of available resources from videos to online art galleries. There are several categories here, including Economics and Politics. Interacting with some of the resources on this site could aid you in your journaling assignments as well as answer questions you have from your worksheets.

<https://www.reviewecon.com/games-activities>

-Review Econ has several online multiple choice quizzes that you can work on as review material. This is a free funded website, so it contains some ads, just ignore them and the quizzes will work fine.

-For my students in World Issues, take a look at how British Universities are handling the COVID-19 pandemic. They have a massive population of international students and they have run into huge issues with quarantining and providing asylum to stranded students. Comparing the British response to the USA response would make for a good journaling activity.
